

The Texas Online College and Career Readiness Resource Center

Michael Williams, Commissioner of Education, Texas Education Agency: In recent years, the Texas Education Agency has prioritized college and career readiness through cultivating and creating resources to assist Texas schools in their efforts to achieve a strong college and career culture. However, it is sometimes difficult to navigate through multiple sites and resources to find solutions for improvement efforts. The Texas Online College and Career Readiness Resource Center was developed to ensure easy access to the most recent research and best practices available today. In fact, the Center has compiled over 250 free resources, each designed to assist every educator in Texas with college and career readiness development. Our mission is to promote postsecondary opportunities for all students in Texas. We ask that you use the Center to improve student academic skill attainment, create global competitiveness for Texas, and build the competencies needed to provide students with greater flexibility and assurances so that they leave our high schools world-ready.
